

THE THREE WAITERS™

With over 12,000 shows in more than 90 countries, The Three Waiters is the original and most successful act of its kind and has been described as, "JUST SUPERB" by Sir Richard Branson and "GREAT, ABSOLUTELY GREAT" by the late, great Luciano Pavarotti. For sophisticated & high quality entertainment book The Three Waiters for your next event.

HOW THE SHOW WORKS

Alfredo poses as the Banquet Manager. He is well mannered and meticulous. He dresses in his own black suit or alternatively wears the attire suitable to the venue. The other two performers are dressed exactly as the other waiters. The three performers arrive one hour before your guests and infiltrate as 'real' waiters from the commencement of the event up to the time of the performance. This could mean serving, topping up drinks and generally being seen as waiters.

PERFORMANCE

There are two short announcements (40 seconds duration) made by Alfredo to establish his character leading up to the commencement of the actual show.

Announcement #1 - During the starter (or thereabouts)

Announcement #2 – Before the main course is laid.

It is after the 2nd announcement that Alfredo sings a huge operatic note prompting thunderous applause. He bows and announces that a guest offered him £50 to do so. He thanks the guest and leaves the stage.

THE SHOW COMMENCES

Once the main course has been laid and drinks have been topped up, Jean-Marc, a French waiter, makes his way to the stage and politely announces that another guest has offered him £100 to sing a full aria in Italian. Alfredo is Italian. He is not very happy.

The plot thickens as Alfredo and Jean-Marc challenge each other's vocal abilities.

Just as they agree to sing something together, a third waiter bursts onto the scene. He's British. The show evolves into a dynamic vocal trio and together, through a variety of popular classics and humorous banter, the award winning show culminates in a dynamic performance à la 'The Three Tenors'. Only at the finale are their true identities revealed.

IMPORTANT

Much of the show is performed amongst the audience.
For safety reasons we ask that all service is ceased during the show.

The duration of the show is around 25 - 30 minutes